CHICAGO WINS BATFEST FROM CHINESE PLAYERS

aul Des Jardien Holds Locals to Two Hits in Nine Inning Game at Moiliili Field—Teams Stage Wonderful Exhibition for Five Innings, When Chinese Pitcher Weakens—Cavin Starts Trouble in Sixth By Hammering Home Run to Right

Pitcher Luck Yee, who was on the mound yesterday afternoon at Moiliili field working against the Chicago team, went like a world-beater for five innings, and the hard-hitting Maroons lined nary a hit during this period. Jardien, who was on the firing line for the Maroons, was also pitched great ball, and the Chinese players failed to annex but one single and run up to the sixth.

A person might casually remark about offense that the first five in the of yesterday's struggle was a slum, pure ball game that they beat anywhere in the big brush line 13 healthy batters annexing one single in an attempt. "It's a summer while it lasted," said a person from the bleachers. The owner hat voice is hereby entitled to a in Truth, Chapter No. 1. But something had to happen. It did, in the sixth inning. The Chicago team decided to change Luck Yee's name to Un-Luck Yee. They changed his very; they changed his smile, and they changed his name to Un-Luck Yee. The Chinaman in the bleachers a merry time for five innings with the Maroons. The green-colored worked all right, but when he began the tactics by shooting off colored crackers in the sixth inning, he had only one opportunity to in five innings, walked up to the in the opening of the sixth, and decided to spoil the home team's by alighting a hard drive to left center field for two sacks, run singled and Hart was held at d. Then Gavin, who hails from Weston, Texas, spilled the grounds light, and was back on the bench the ball came back to the in. L. Rudolph singled, and Page added him. R. George drove a sizzler such the infield, and advanced when Miller placed a hit safely. George at the plate. McConnell scored, and walked, and Kimmiller scored. It was all for that inning, and in fact that was all for Un-Luck Yee. Jardien a Star.

Un-Luck Yee and Page scored in the next on a hit, a walk and an error, and Page singled in the ninth. The little second-sacker was caught third, and Page came home when Miller drove a pretty triple to Kimmiller. Paul Des Jardien auralled all the laurels that are due for work in yesterday's game. He had fast ball working in good shape, and better control than in his first, and stood out like a big leaver. Pitching a two-hit game to one often now in any community the big fellow is deserving of a lot of credit for his work on the mound. H. K. Yim, who relieved Luck in the seventh, allowed the Vardon hits and three runs in the eighth. The Chicago team played the same ball that has been making them so popular with the fans. They made stops, and throws that are not he organization of a variety of clubs and classes for both boys and girls will be a feature of the work of the Palama Settlement during the coming year. The settlement workers returning this week from their vacations, and on September 13 the fall work will begin.

Palama and Kalihl boast of a large number of boys and girls, and a majority of these make the settlement headquarters during the winter and spring months. They play baseball and other games, join gymnasium classes, swim in the big tank, organize orchestras and dramatic clubs and play at night in the many educational classes. The younger children of the neighborhood are prepared for school the settlement's kindergarten, which opens next Monday.

Under the direction of Miss Evelyn O'Connell, many classes are being opened which will interest the children of the neighborhood. There will be Monday and Sunday afternoon clubs for girls' orchestra and a dramatic club girls. On Wednesday evenings

GOLF Analyzed and Simplified

By JOHN ALBERT SCOTT

No. 1—The Grip, Left Hand.

To establish a correct connection between player and club, is the fundamental of golf. Vardon, Braid and Taylor, who have, between them, won the Open Championship of Great Britain (generally acknowledged as the world's championship) sixteen times in the last twenty years, all use the same form of grip. It is safe, therefore, to assume there is sound reason for their method of gripping the club or they would not be in accord in using it.

They represent three different physical types, in height, size of hands, length of arms, etc., in fact there are no points of physical resemblance. The end of the forefinger will come to the first joint of the second finger.

It is this position of the left hand, the right conforming to it, that automatically gives the "turn of the wrists" in taking the club to the top of the swing, as will later appear. It is the very beginning of a correct golf swing.

If the club is held in this manner, with the left hand, it will be found that the tips of the second and third fingers will touch the large lump at the base of the thumb, the end of the second finger just at the joint where the thumb joins the hand.

The end of the little finger will not quite go around the grip; there will be a space between it and the palm. The end of the forefinger will come to the first joint of the second finger.

use the same style of grip. "There is a reason." The grip these men use is the overlapping grip, usually called the Vardon Grip, because his use and success with it first called attention to it, although there is some doubt as to its origin.

To illustrate it, I will use photographs of Vardon's hands, which he permitted me to take. Photograph No. 1 used with this article, shows the left hand. It will be seen that this hand is so placed, partly over the shaft, as to permit one using it, to see the joints of the first three fingers, where they join the hand. The V formed by the thumb and hand is pointing toward the right shoulder, not straight up. The thumb is on top of the grip and against the hand, closing the V. That part of the forefinger which shows in the photograph, is pointing downward, in line with the V.

They are still talking about the wonderful game of Saturday afternoon when St. Louis won from the Chicago University team in the twelfth inning. The two teams have come to an agreement, and the big game of the local season will be played this afternoon at Athletic Park. They all say it will be the big game, and the St. Louis admirers are coming out in a bunch to cheer their team on to victory. There are not so very many Chicago graduates in the city, but those here will all come to the game to join in the celebration that the Maroons hope to start when they battle with the locals. Francis Brown vs. Pat Page. Take your choice of pitchers with strong teams to back them up.

Chicago played a great game yesterday against the Chinese team, and their work during the series has won them many friends, and it is thought that neither team will enter the field as a favorite. Both Schuman and Cole are nice receivers, and there should not be any choice as to the two backstops. Albert Akana on first and Chillingworth at short playing, to form equal the Chicago men in those positions, and perhaps will hit better. At second and third, the Maroons have two fast players both at the bat and in the field. Lang Akana and Argabrite are the stars of the locals in the field and both measure up to the standard of Catron and Gray in fielding.

Kixmiller is a much better player than Nye, both at bat and in the field, while the pitchers' work may be judged by the game of Saturday, or you may wait until today. The attraction for this afternoon looks to be the best game scheduled in the Chicago series. The game will be called at 4 o'clock with Capt. Stayton at the helm. The lineup as they bat:

Chicago—Catron, cf.; Cavin, 3b.; Rudolph, 2b.; Gray, rf.; Page, p.; Kixmiller, lf.; McConnell, ss.; Cole, c.; Weidemann, 1b.

St. Louis—Chillingworth, ss.; Peden, 2b.; Argabrite, cf.; Lang Akana, lf.; Albert Akana, 1b.; Nye, rf.; Swan, 3b.; Schuman, c.; Brown, p.

The Detroit Tigers gained a full game on the Boston Red Sox in the American League race, and this morning were but a game and a half from the leaders. The Tigers did not play yesterday, but Carrigan's men did, and J. L. Donovan led his Yankee to a double victory. Inasmuch as Donovan was not a star under Jennings, it didn't take him any secret to reach the lead over the Sox today in the metropolis, while Detroit is booked for a little with the reinforced Chicago Ham at Comiskey's ball yard.

GOLF REIGNS SUPREME IN POINT OF NUMBERS

More People Play the Royal and Ancient Game Than Engage in Tennis or Baseball—Growth of Game Due to Number of Businessmen Who Have Taken Up Sport for Relaxation—Quimet Credited With Doing Much to Build Up Eighteen Hole Game By Defeating the Leading Stars of Great Britain

By OWEN MERRICK. If someone were to gradually slip up on you, Mr. Baseball Fan, some day when you were idly dreaming about Ty Cobb stealing home, or the Feds playing 10-cent ball, and should whisper in your quivering ear that there are more people playing golf today in the United States than are coveting on the baseball diamond, what would you say to such a sport? Perhaps you would say "non-resident in the dome," or would you stop to learn something? If the matter comes up, gentle fan, believe the man. He's right. It's hard to make the diamond man believe it, still it's true.

Twenty years ago we believed that only a few old men past 50 dabbled in the great Scotch game, and golf links were for the plutocrat only. At that time it is true that there were but few links in America, but the game was starting, and now wherever you go you will see nine and 18-hole courses. There may be more baseball players in Honolulu than golfers, but this doesn't apply to all America. Cities all over the country are establishing public golf links, something unheard of a few years ago, and these courses are becoming more popular every day. Some of the greatest stars in the tennis world learned the game at the public courts in San Francisco, and it may come to pass that our Outsmen and our Gardeners of the future may learn the game in the same way.

Course increasing. The courses on the Pacific coast have doubled in the last four years, and cities now of 10,000 have their driver and brasse as well as their bat and glove. They are going to have a nine-hole course in a little town of 2000 population in Nevada, and they have nothing for a base but the sage brush. People say oft times: "I can't see any fun in chasing a little pill over the hills and dales all day." Of course they can't, because they have never played the game. It's the man who plays it that derives the pleasure out of the royal and ancient sport. Books could be written on the benefits derived from handling a driver or putter.

A young man on the Pacific coast who had been quite a star on the tennis courts and a wizard on the tennis courts was asked to try a game of golf. "Nothing doing with that game," he said, "but he was finally persuaded to try. At the first tee the young man was given his instructions and he proceeded to drive the ball far afield. The first time he missed. The next time he just grazed the ball. That set him to thinking that there was something in the game after all. The third time he drove the ball 60 yards. He took the ball back and tried again. This time he bettered it. From that time on the young man paid homage to golf, and in his collection of athletic implements today you will see more drivers and mid-irons than you will bats and rackets.

For the Tired Man. Golf has cut into the ranks of baseball in many instances, and it will more so unless our national game is kept on a high basis. First the English and Scotch played the link game. Then the tired businessman, the fatigued individual learned that he could play the game and enjoy it, discovered it, the antidote for his ailments and immediately became another unit in the fast growing phalanx of golfers who derived pleasure, exercise and health building by taking advantage of his afternoons. Walking around the course on a nice day appealed to him more than sitting in the grandstand watching the teams squabble with the umpires.

Quimet Helped Game. Francis Quimet is a young man and practically a beginner in the ranks of star golfers, but it would not be far from wrong to say that this young golf artist has done as much for the game as anyone in America. When he won out over Vardon and Braid he set America talking. People who had never taken up golf said: "What's all this newspaper talk about this fellow 'whatever his name is'?" What did he do? I'll have to read something about it." It set this man talking, and it had the newspapermen talking and since Quimet won the title from the great Englishmen in the royal and ancient game the newspapers of America have devoted twice as much space as ever before to golf.

There are more people in the gallery now. There are more who follow around the course in tournaments, and there are more critics than ever before. People are talking it and people are playing it, and it will not be long before every community of any size will have its nine or 18-hole course. The island of Oahu is an ideal place for the game. While they are shivering at South Shore, at Onawa, and at Mendowbrook the golfers of Honolulu may be enjoying an afternoon's play at any time during the year. They are plowing up their links in England now to raise food for the populace, but after it is all over they will be back playing on the same old courses that may help to make history for England.
